

Inclusion of disability issues in the Myanmar peace process

Key points

- The peace process is a unique opportunity for Myanmar to become a more fair and equal country, and to achieve justice for victims of the conflict (including those who have been injured by landmines).
- At the moment disability issues are not being addressed in the Myanmar peace process.
- Disability issues are not part of the discussion agenda in UPC sessions or the plan of the working committees.

Options for inclusion of PWDs

1.

PWDs testify at UPC sessions

PWDs, including victims of landmine accidents, could testify and help all parties understand the issues they face.

2.

Inclusion of issues

Disability issues (including landmines) could be included in negotiation agenda.

Inclusion on the agenda will ensure that the peace process responds to these issues in some way.

3.

PWDs are included in dialogues

PWDs could be included among civil society in dialogue forums.
